ONStor adds to Green Grid partner list

14 Feb 2008

Environmental awareness group The Green Grid can now count ONStor among its members, the company has revealed.

The development follows the launch last summer of ONStor's GO Green initiative, which has also seen research carried out into the industry's current approach to making its data centres more eco-friendly.

Some 63 per cent of respondents to the survey told the firm their data centre had at some time run out of power unexpectedly, while 40 per cent added that they were not aware of any discussions having taken place to address the greenness of their data centre.

Narayan Venkat, vice-president of marketing at ONStor, comments: "Our Green Grid membership demonstrates our commitment to collaborating with the IT industry to help drive adoption of green data centre solutions, turning words into action."

The Green Grid recently announced that it has now passed the 150-member milestone and continues to grow in its attempt to discover non-vendor-specific solutions to the question of IT energy usage.
